THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

UNWISE REPUBLICAN FINANCEERING.

The Philadelphia Times in alluding to the subject gives the case somewhat in detail as follows:

When President Cleveland retired on the 4th of March, 1889, he left a surplus in the Treasury of $65,000,000 exclusive of the subsidiary coin and deposits to credit of paymasters for the payment of matured obligations against the Government. In addition to this $65,000,000 there was in the Treasury the bank note redemption fund of $55,000,000 held for the redemption of National Bank notes.

The last Republican Congress that served during the first two years of President Harrison's term not only dissipated the $65,000,000 of surplus, but it covered into the Treasury the $55,000,000 of trust fund for the redemption of bank notes and expended that also. It also passed bills increasing the permanent expenditures of the Government over $60,000,000 a year, and enacted a new tariff law that increased the cost of the necessaries of life and diminished the revenues of the Treasury.

The result was that on the day that President Harrison retired from office he had expended the $120,000,000 of surplus, and could make a balance appear in the Treasury only by falsifying the accounts and claiming as assets the deposits to the credit of paymasters and the subsidiary coin which could not be used for the payment of a dollar of public debt. Thus President Harrison retired after having expended $120,000,000 of surplus, increased the permanent expenses over $60,000,000 a year, and reduced the revenue while increasing the taxes upon the people.

When Mr. Cleveland came into power in 1893 he found a bankrupt Treasury, reduced revenues from the McKinley tariff, and largely increased expenditures which he was compelled to meet. In addition to these misfortunes, financial disturbance came from the disastrous silver policy of the Harrison administration, and business and industrial depression prevailed not only throughout our entire land but throughout the whole world. Tariff revenues were diminished while the expenditures created by the Harrison administration remained and must be met out of the Treasury. Thus without having created a single dollar of additional expenditure under his own administration, Mr. Cleveland has been compelled to meet largely increased expenses with largely reduced revenues.

The new tariff bill will doubtless produce ample revenue when it shall be fairly under way, but until then the Government credit must be maintained, and it can be done only by resorts to loans. This method has been adopted by the President, and it is a manly assurance to the country and to the world that the credit of the nation, so vital to the success of all enterprises, will be scrupulously maintained during the entire term of the present administration.

THE TIDE ALREADY TURNING.

The political tide that engulfed the Democratic party on the 6th of November is already turning and the flood is surging back. A Cincinnati dispatch of the 13th, says:

"A special election was held in this (Hamilton) county to-day. One week ago the Republicans carried the county by over 22,000. To-day the Democrats carried it by over 3,300, making a 25,000 flop in one week.

The election to-day was for Judge of the Insolvency Court. The Republican nominee was Attorney John R. Von Seggern, the Democratic nominee Attorney Aaron McNeill.

This was a big flop within a week, and is evidence the Democrats of Ohio are not dead.

Hard Times the Cause.

Congressman William L. Wilson, of West Virginia, Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means, in a recent letter to the New York Press, says of the cause of the recent Democratic defeat:

"Undoubtedly there were local influences, as there were individual candidates and factional fights, that contributed to and emphasized the general result, but it must be admitted that there were strong forces everywhere operative that really shaped and brought about that result.

"And the greatest of all these forces was the severe industrial depression that for a year or more past has hardened the lot and made anxious the lives of a large section of our people. Hard times is an enemy before which no political party in America has ever been able to make a successful stand when in power."

Our Dangerous Floating Debt.

The Government of the United States has too large a floating debt to do business with safety. It could manage to get along pretty smoothly as long as it had a large surplus of ready cash on hand with which to tide over such emergent occasions as occurred in 1873 and 1884. But there is danger in redundant revenue and large surpluses. They breed extravagance as surfeits breed indigestion. There would be no billion dollars expenditure every two years if there had not been an opportunity and an incitement in the condition of the Federal Treasury. The demand liabilities of the Treasury are, therefore, not only a mischief in themselves, but they are the prolific source of collateral mischiefs.

The public mind has been debauched as to the true nature and office of money by making an evidence of debt an arbitrary measure of value. There is no way out of the evil in which the finances of the country are entangled except to take immediate measures to rid ourselves of Government paper money. Until that shall have been accomplished no safe basis of business can be established that will not be at any time liable to upheaval as the result of a financial convulsion, engineered possibly by cliques or syndicates organized to make profit out of public disaster.—Phila. Record.

REPUBLICANS, who believe the result of the late election will ressurect the McKinley bill, will be mistaken. The signs of the times do not point that way, and John Sherman is one of the men who say so. Seeing that "promotion for the sake of protection" is played out, he now declares himself only "a moderate protectionist."

THE BOY IN SCHOOL.

A little camera Mary had—
She didn't think it wrong—
And every place that Mary went
She took the thing along.

'Twas of the instantaneous kind,
'Twould take the lightning's flesh
Or anything more quickly than
The miser takes his cash.

She tried the camera on a fly,
And caught it as it flew,
And of the busy buzzing bee
She got a splendid view.

But when she tried to catch a boy
Who o'er his school books pored,
The instantaneous process failed—
She was completely floored.

The times when he began a task
Were very, very few,
And when he did begin she failed,
Since he so soon was through.

A PRACTICAL EDUCATION.

Knowledge of Everyday Affairs the Most Useful and to be Sought After. What Should Girls Be Taught?

Much as the good workmen produced by the old apprenticeship system have been praised, no thoughtful man would care to turn the world back to such a wasteful system of teaching skill. It is true that in the absence of special schools for teaching trades, and also of the apprenticeship system, good workmen become scarce, those who learn trades picking them upslowly without guidance. But having destroyed the wasteful apprenticeship system, society now provides manual training or trade schools to take the place of that system. It has been proved beyond doubt that they can make as good workmen as apprentices ever became, and in much less time than the latter are required to serve.

In the larger cities the boys are tolerably well provided for. They may get a general education in the public or parochial schools, and then they may attend special schools where trades or professions are taught, or business colleges. Some, of course, are too poor to avail themselves of these advantages, but even for the poor who are required to go to work without special training night schools are provided, and with such help they may advance themselves.

So much has been said of the higher education of women that there is a very general assumption that the position of a young girl with respect to education has been greatly improved during the last half hundred years. It has been improved so far as general education is concerned, and so far as the opening of some of the professional schools to women provides for their special training, but in one matter of the first importance the position of a young girl of the present day is not as favorable to the development of her powers as was that of her grandmother.

Elizabeth Bisland, writing in the North American Review, points out that, notwithstanding the recent enlargement of the field of work for women, the bulk of the sex devote their lives to the profession of housewifery and to the duties of wife and motherhood. In the olden time, before the higher education absorbed their time and attention, they were trained to the discharge of these duties by their mothers as though they were apprentices. They did not acquire so much book knowledge as the girls of to-day, but they learned, what was of more importance to them and to the community, "things, rather than words." No one will begrudge them the higher general education they now receive, but they need also special training. If it can be given to them by their mothers, well and good, but if not, then they should have special schools of housewifery, just as the boys have special schools for the trades and professions.

Apprenticeship to trades passed away from the larger cities (it still lingers in country places) with the specialization of branches of trade, the general introduction of machinery and the changed conditions of living, due to a great expansion of manufacturing establishments. It would be impossible to restore it, even though it should be thought desirable to do so, but in place of it has been built up to some extent a system of special school training.

When the boys were apprentices the girls were being taught by their mothers all the various household arts and sciences. They were fitted to become wives and mothers, not merely by being taught to sew and cook, but by being instructed in household hygiene, the care of children and the economic administration of affairs. But time has changed the conditions under which household work is done. Innumerable things that used to be produced at home are now bought from the factory; there is more leisure for education and the girls receive a better general education. But their destiny remains the same. Nine-tenths of them must look forward to entering the profession of a housewife some day, and for this they should have special training, just as the boys are given special training for the trades or professions they expect to enter. As much of this training as may be should be given at home, but it can be supplemented by school work.

There is no reason to limit the ambitions of girls or shut them out of other professional schools. If they want to be doctors or lawyers, they are obliged to enter medical or law schools. If they want to or expect to become housewives, they should enter a school for housewives—that of their own homes or an organized institution. Their general education has done for them no more than it has done for the boys. It has trained their faculties, cultivated their tastes, fitted them for special studies, and they should follow the example of their brothers by preparing themselves in some way for the special life-work that lies before them.—Balto. Sun.

TEACHER—"Tommy, did you find out anything about the origin of the dollar mark?" Tommy—"I asked paw about it, and he said the straight lines stood for the pillars of society, and the crooked one for the way they got their money." —Cincinnati Tribune.

DOUBTING HIS DIAGNOSIS.—Doctor: You say you swallow the seeds when you eat grapes? Mrs. Hatburn: Always. Doctor: Then I fear yours is a case of appendicitis. Mrs. Hartburn: Oh, no, Doctor; I'm not fashionable enough to have that.

THE MIKADO'S FATE.

A THANKSGIVING TRAGEDY.

It was about the first of November that the big turkey, the Mikado of the farmyard, was given a house all to himself and everybody waited upon him in the most untiring manner. At first he was somewhat astonished at so marked a change in his fortunes. Such extraordinary consideration as he now received at everybody's hands amazed him for a time, but he soon settled it in his mind entirely to his satisfaction.

"Ho! ho!" he said "Ha! ha! They have just learned my worth. I have always known that I was a great genius, with a brain as big as a wash tub, and I think the other turkeys, poor insignificant things, and the chickens, sorry creatures, knew it also. At least, they have all shown a wholesome respect for my power, but I must admit that I have been slow to impress the people with my importance. It has come at last, however. See how they truckle to me, kowtow to me, supply my every want almost before it is felt, and make menials of themselves to cater to my pleasure!"

This he said to himself as he walked by himself. The other citizens of the farmyard looked at him with glowering faces and the bitterness of envy in their hearts. He had always tyrannized over them, and they hated him with a hatred all the more deadly because it was concealed under the mask of respect. Now, though he had never done a humane or generous thing in his life, they beheld him housed and feasted like a king, with the sauce of admiration served up to him every hour. They couldn't understand it; they saw no justice in it, and they murmured against it.

A poor, hard working hen who had brought up her family by the strictest economy and most faithful industry, and who had been robbed of her last bite again and again by the heartless Mikado, spoke her mind about it.

"It's an outrage," she said, an outrage on all decent fowls to see that brute of a Mikado in clover up to his comb while the rest of us scratch from morning till night merely to keep life in our bodies. Such things are rapidly creating an aristocracy of sex. In the future when male and female are both equal before the law there will be none of this. But it's the way of the world, and always has been. The basest and least deserving get into power, because they are so course that they can ride over any obstacle, having no sensibilities to wound."

Here a great swell of a cock, a monopolist of high degree, looked away and pretended not to hear; but the others listened attentively, sighed, and admitted that it was hard to rise in the world while such monsters as the Mikado had the power to oppress.

A middle-aged anarchist sputtered around at a great rate; but as he had always talked rather more than he should they didn't give him the closest attention. A fair and fat hen of good figure smiled scornfully, and said that one could expect nothing but coarse vanity from a person of really low pedigree like the Mikado. For her part, come what would, she had the comforting knowledge that the blood of the Brahmas flowed in her veins. Her ancestors were Asiatic kings. Then she strutted around to show off her figure, which really was perfect.

A young turkey, who was considered something of a crank because he wore glasses, was greatly given to philosophy and metaphysics, had gone so far as to lecture a little and was thinking of a literary profession, here piped up: "It is my opinion, friends, that we are to blame for our lack of success. The Mikado is merely carrying out the theories of the new school of Boston thinkers and the occultists of the east, which he has dropped on, I verily believe, through my teaching. He has a powerful will, and he has secretly and persistently demanded the good things of life and is getting them. The great force, my friends, is mind. But while we have been talking about it, he, like the pirate he is, has grabbed the idea and put it into operation."

An old and opinionated cat that had been apparently sleeping on a fence post now had a word to say. "You are very inexperienced creatures. When you have lived as long as I have (which none of you are likely to do, I am sorry to say, for reasons it would be indelicate now to mention) you will know that what appears sometimes to be great good fortune is really the greatest curse that could befall us. I will not here go into particulars, but I will entreat you not to be envious of the Mikado. This is a very dramatic world. The man who is up to-day may be down to-morrow. Envy no one. Perhaps your hard lot is better a thousand times for your soul's good than the wealth of a Gould or a Vanderbilt, or even the Mikado. Ben Franklin spoke wisely when he said:

'He that is down need fear no fall,
He that is humble none at all.'"

Just then the Mikado, whose doors had been opened by the beautiful daughter of the house to give him an hour's walk in the sunshine, came near them with lordly gait, head erect and wings scraping the earth in overwhelming pride. In spite of the cat's sermon on humility, in the face of the fact that they knew she spoke the truth, they felt shriveled and mean in the presence of this petted and admired creature. He walked near them, smiled scornfully, and said:

Stand out of my way, you creatures small,
Stand out of the way of my shadow;
For I am the king and the boss of all,
Oh, I am the great Mikado.

And they stood out of his way, though here and there was one who could not refrain from shedding tears, so deep was his humiliation.

The mistress of the house, accompanied by a friend, just then appeared on the other side of the fence, and the object of their attention seemed to be the Mikado. He wasn't slow to show his appreciation of the distinction, either. He strutted and gobbled in the most pompous and self-gratulatory way.

"Isn't he magnificent?" said the visitor. "I should think he would weigh nearly twenty pounds. Oh, isn't he a treasure?"

The Mikado heard this remark and almost fainted with delight. "Ah," he thought, "I was right in always believing myself an important personage. I hear it now from the lips of those who have heretofore pretended to be my superiors."

"What do you feed him on?" asked the visitor.

"Oat meal scalded in hot milk and various little dainties. It's a joy to see him eat."

At this the Mikado felt himself bursting with pride.

"My daughter is to be married on Thanksgiving day, and he is to be the great feature of the table," said the hostess.

"Oh, my," thought the Mikado, "won't that be fine? I am to figure at a wedding, to be the great feature of the whole proceeding, it seems. I must order something nice to wear."

The cat on the fence post also heard, but she only licked her lips and smiled knowingly.

The days went on and the Mikado only grew fatter and more domineering every hour, and the other fowls became more and more cast down.

On Thanksgiving morning his doors were opened and he was invited to come forth. This was the day on which he was to receive greater honors than ever, and he waddled out cumbered by his excessive flesh, with more arrogance than usual. He was a little surprised when the hired man grabbed him by the legs and suddenly inverted him. It was an undignified attitude for a bird of his plumage, to say the least; but he reflected a moment and concluded that it was but fitting, after all, for a creature of his distinction to be carried, and of course this awkward fellow didn't know how to carry him gracefully or even comfortably.

He had no time to frame other thoughts, for in a moment more the hired man had assassinated him, and his head was lying on one side of the chopping block and his body on the other.

His late envious associates ran in all directions, chilled with horror, nor were they seen again that day. He graced the feast, to be sure; he was the great feature of it, but not in the capacity he had so conceitedly anticipated. Instead of the fine suit of fashionable garments he had expected to be arrayed in, he appeared shorn of his feathers, with his skin cruelly browned and his legs cut off at the knees, a sorry and humbled Mikado, surely.

In a short time his very memory was forgotten, or recalled only with a sneer, or to be cited as an example of what conceit will bring any one to.

The day after Thanksgiving there was a little talk over his head and his bones, which were found in a ditch by his despised comrades. His fate was a lesson to them.

"After all," said one, "we might have known that such a sudden rise into affluence could bode no good. Up like a rocket and down like a stick, you know."

"Do you remember my words," said the cat, who came strolling along, bulging in body more than usual from having enjoyed extraordinary Thanksgiving blessings. "I told you to envy no one; that it was a dangerous thing to reach such eminence as the Mikado enjoyed. Poor fool, he did enjoy it while it lasted."

"Could it be," said the young turkey with the eyeglasses and taste for metaphysics, "could it be that my doctrines led him astray? Still, he was a good illustration of the truth of what I have been preaching—that if you persistently desire the best you will get it. But the best, in his case, didn't seem to be really good for him after all, and now the question arises: 'Is it good for any of us?' I must admit that I am somewhat confused on this point, and, in spite of the Mikado's grave faults of character, I lament the tragedy in which he was the victim. For some reason, his death was the occasion of general rejoicing in the house, and I have even picked up a word here and there which goes to show that the people who were the cause of his death gave thanks over his body. They actually called the day 'Thanksgiving,' so grateful were they that he was gone. Perhaps they feared that in his excessive love of power he would rise some day, seize the reins of government, and trample them all under his feet. If so, I half excuse the murder, though I am too much of a Buddhist to sympathize with a festival which sanctions the destruction of living creatures, and the eating of them, too. In the round of existence, depend upon it, my friends, all such things are evened up. They who kill shall be killed in turn; if not in this life, some embodiment in the far future."

The hen who was in favor of equal suffrage said that after all there were compensations in life. She still held her old views; but she had learned a lesson in patience. Her dream of political equality would be realized; but she must wait, and while she waited work as well as talk. A very aged old bird of no particular lineage cleared his throat just then. As he was generally silent, he commanded great attention when he did speak. He said: "You are getting on to the true philosophy of life at last. Agitation doesn't accomplish half as much as people thinks it does. The influences which really move the world are subtle. Your talkers think they revolutionize the world; but the real power comes from higher, much higher"—and he subsided into silence.

The noted anarchist rooster had nothing at all to say until his views were called for. Even then he evaded it until cornered and compelled to talk. Then he straightened up and put on his old time, important manner. "It is the beginning of the end, my friends," he said. "Monsters like the Mikados die of their own greed. They are their own executors. Had he divided his abundance with us we would all have had a layer or so of the fat which encumbered him and brought him to grief, and he might have been alive to-day. But, no—he must have the earth. Nothing was too much for him. We had to starve that he might life. All of you can testify that he lived upon the proceeds of your labor, for you scratched and he came along just as your bite was ready for your mouth and snatched it from you, and you dared not say your souls were your own."

"But what of the lady with the purest blood of Asia in her veins?" asked a dapper young cock. "I haven't seen her to-day."

"Nor have I," said a dozen voices. Here the cat spoke again. "I am sorry to say that our fair friend has shared the Mikado's fate. The chief cause of pride with her proved her ruin. Her good blood gave her a fine figure, and the people of this country are a flesh-eating race. The have no scruples against eating any of you who are so unfortunate to possess sweet, clean flesh. So you see that it is never safe to boast."

"Oh, dear; what a difficult and dangerous world to live in!" said all in one voice.

The old house dog, who was fond of Shakespeare, came on the scene, sniffed contemptuously at the Mikado's bones, and said: "Alas! he lived for self, and now none are so poor as to do him reverence." GERTRUDE GARRISON.

A Romance in Real Life.

Recently in a lawyer's office, in the city of New York, a man and wife met who had not seen each other for twenty years. Each believed the other dead, but each had remained faithful to his and her vows.

This romance in real life, for such it is, began nearly a quarter of a century ago in Southampton, England. Edward Sheffield was a ship captain. His home was at Dover, but he met Ellen Marshall at Southampton. There they fell in love with each other, and there they were married. For two years all passed smoothly, then Sheffield's ship was chartered for Brazil, and on its way there a storm arose and the vessel was wrecked. All on board were lost but Sheffield. He clung for days to the wave-washed hull till finally a passing schooner took him on board.

He landed friendless and penniless on the South American coast. He turned his hand to any sort of work to be had in the towns where fate had cast him. For years he toiled until he gathered enough means to take him home, only to find that his wife had gone. Then he went to Australia, bought a small ranch near Melbourne, and took to sheep raising. He became moderately rich but never married again, although he heard his wife was dead.

Several months ago while ransacking his old sea chest, Sheffield found memoranda concerning 500 acres of land in Montana, which he had bought for a song twenty-five years ago from a land agency and had forgotten. The thought seized him to write to a London lawyer, and find out whether the land was worth anything. The London attorney wrote to a New York lawyer, and he communicated with another in Helena, which was near the land in question.

The reply came that a Mrs. Sheffield had shown deeds for the land and sold most of the acres at a high price, because of silver being found in several places. Mrs. Sheffield was a widow, the Helena lawyer reported, and was living in Helena. She was communicated with. She wrote that she had waited for years at home until perfectly satisfied that her husband was no longer in the land of the living. News of the shipwreck had reached Southampton, and she mourned him as dead. Then she took the deeds for the Montana land and came to America. She went immediately to Helena, made an examination, and was amazed to find herself rich.

Sheffield sold his Australian ranch, crossed the Pacific, came to New York, and there his wife met him. The interview was a brief one and both have gone to Montana.

This is truly a romance in real life, and a verification of the old adage that "truth is stranger than fiction."

Bill Was a Politician.

But His Wife Argued With Him in a Convincing Way.

As I rode up to a house in the Cumberland Mountains, I heard the woman at the gate calling to a man near the house, "Bill, fetch me that gun."

As I came within speaking distance the man came out with the gun and brought it down to the lady.

"Good morning," I said in my suavest manner, "can I get a shoe on my horse here?"

"Who are you?" she asked, holding the gun in front of her.

"Shore?"

"Of course. Here's a letter showing who I am," and I handed her a note to a well-known timber firm in the mountains.

She read it through, and eyed me suspiciously a moment before setting down the gun.

"I reckon it's all right," she said, "but I can't take no risks. Bill," she said to the man, "fetch out that hammer and them nails."

"What's wrong?" I inquired in some surprise. "Is there shooting going on?"

"No, but thar's likely so be."

"What is it? Another feud broken out?"

"No, it's those plaguey politishaners."

"What have they been doing?" I asked with interest, as this was something quite out of the ordinary.

"Well, mister," she explained, when I got off my horse to let the man nail the shoe on, "you see it's this way; Bill's my old man; he's kinder smart and talks about the tariff and them kind uv things, and gits drunk and plays keerds, and these politishaners 'round here has got the idee, 'caze I've got some money in my own right, that Bill ought to run fer the legislature. I get my back squar agin it, and I kin handle Bill all right, but I can't manage the pusky politishaners, an' they kep' comin' here pesterin' the life outen me and gettin' Bill so onsettled an' onsatisfied that there wuzn't hardly no livin' with him. The last batch wuz here Sunday, an' I just up an' tol' the whole passle uv 'em that ef they come ag'in I'd try the cold lead kuore. They laughed some, but they left and they tol' me they would send up a man that would convince me I wuz wrong in no time. I thought mebbe you wuz the man, an' mebbe you air. All I've got ter say is that I ain't keerin' a tater about the tariff shers uv the day, an' ef you think you kin convince me that I am, yer welcome to try it."

She reached for the gun, and I didn't try it.

THEY WERE GOOD BUT THEY ARE GONE.

There was a man who never told a lie—
But he's dead—
Never said it was wet when the weather was dry—
Never said
He'd caught fish when he hadn't caught one,
Never said he'd done something that he hadn't done,
Never scolded his wife, and never got mad
And wouldn't believe that the world was so bad,
A respecter of men, a defender of woman,
Who believed the divine, and in that which was human,
Meek as Moses—he never was understood,
And the poor man died of being too good.
And he's dead.

There was a woman who never had gossiped a bit—
She's dead, too—
Who hated all scandal, nor listened to it,
Who believed in mankind, took care of her cat,
Always turned a deaf ear to this story or that
Never scolded her husband—she never had one;
No sluggard was she, but rose with the sun,
Never whispered in meeting, didn't care for a bonnet
Nor all of the feathers that one could put on it;
Never sat with the choir nor sang the wrong note;
Expressed no desire to lecture or vote,
For the poor soul was deaf as a post—also dumb.
You might have called forever, and she wouldn't have come.
And she's dead.

Law and Morals.

Relative to a "Possum Bake."

At Sharon, Pa., a question of moral's has been raised which should at once receive the attention of the debating societies. It seems that a number of young gentlemen composing a social club determined to give a 'possum bake, "'possum and 'taters." They placed an order with one Jones, the local Nimrod, for the 'possum. Jones used his utmost energy and skill as a hunter to procure the bird, but 'possums were scarce and shy, and Jones could not capture one. Like every true hunter, he disliked to admit that he had been unsuccessful, and then his kind heart bled to think his friends would be disappointed of their festival and have to go 'possumless to bed. In the kindness of his heart, therefore, and at the same time to maintain his reputation as a hunter, he sacrificed his favorite cat skinned it, prepared it, and garnished it with herbs, and sent it to the club. It was baked and eaten and all who were at the feast pronounced it the most delicious 'possum they had ever tasted. Some time afterward the members of the club learned by accident the true nature of the 'possum they had consumed, and instead of going to Jones in a body to thank him for his self-sacrificing act and for the delicious repast he had furnished, they became indignant, declared they had been grossly deceived, and forthwith instituted a suit for damages.

Upon the question of law involved in the case there is scarcely room for two opinions. Jones will surely win the case. The plaintiffs, in order to recover, must show that they have sustained some injury, when, in point of fact, Jones can prove that the plaintiffs admitted that it was the best 'possum they ever tasted. They are in the position of a man who had ordered a slider terrapin and been served with a diamond-back, or one who had ordered a coot or a south southerly and received a canvas-back. But, in a point of morals, was Jones justified in using deceit and selling an animal under a false name? This is a question of ethics for the debating societies. Practical men will say that the innocent deception is more than equalized by the public service which Jones has performed. It may be wrong to have skim milk masqueraded as cream, but no one will object to having cream masqueraded as skim-milk. The man who first discovered that English sparrows make a superior article of reed birds was a benefactor. So is every one who has discovered some new article of food, except Eve. What would the world have been if the pigs had not been pulled out of the burning building? What does not humanity owe to the man who first discovered that the frolicksome oyster was good for food and pleasant to the eyes and greatly to be desired? Jones' timely discovery may transfer thousands of sweetly singing cats from the back-yard fence to the 'possum bake, and any right-feeling cat will be amply compensated for the temporary inconvenience of being baked as a 'possum by the compliments his mortal and appetizing remains receive from those who feast.—Ex.

CAN'T BE DONE.

Of the Hungarian statesmen Frank Deak it is related that he used to rid himself of troublesome visitors by telling them the following story:

"Once, when in Paris, Napoleon I. paid a visit to a hospital for old soldiers. Here he perceived among the rest a man who had lost one of his arms, and he entered into conversation with him.

"'Where did you lose your arm?' asked the Emperor.

"'At Waterloo, your Majesty.'

"'Then, no doubt, you curse the Emperor and your country every time you look at your mutilated limb?'

"'No, indeed,' protested the veteran. 'for the Emperor and my native land I would readily sacrifice my other arm, if needs be.'

"'I can hardly believe that,' the Emperor quietly remarked, and passed on.

"But the soldier, anxious to prove that he was in earnest, immediately drew a sabre from its sheath and lopped off his other arm."

"Well, what have you to say of such a man and such an action?"

"A most sublime act of self-sacrifice! A truly noble character!" This was the style of reply invariable given.

"But the story has one flaw," he would gravely add.

"What is that pray?"

"It is simply impracticable. How could a one armed man contrive to cut off his only remaining arm?"—Aftonbladet.

Marriage License Act.

Attorney General Hensel Says the Law is in Force—Supplement of 1893.

Attorney General Hensel having been applied to by the Auditor General, at the suggestion of some of the clerks of orphans' court in the State, for an official opinion as to whether or not there is any marriage license law in force, in view of the contention that the act of 1893 on this subject repeals the marriage license act of 1885, or suspends it until October 1st, 1895, sent an answer to Auditor General Gregg last week. The Attorney General declines to give an official opinion upon the subject because, he says, no case or state of facts calling for such an opinion has been presented either to him or to the Auditor General. He says, however, he does not hesitate to express his individual and official opinion that the claim that the act of 1885 is repealed, suspended or abrogated is unsound. He holds that it was the intention of the act of 1893 simply to amend the act of 1885 by providing that hereafter marriage licenses might issue either out of the county in which the ceremony was to be performed, as heretofore, or out of the county of the residence of either of the contracting parties. By the terms of the act of 1893 its enlarged provisions do not become effective until October 1st, 1895. Meantime it is the opinion of Mr. Hensel that the act of June 23d, 1885, requiring marriage licenses and imposing a penalty for the solemnization or witnessing of marriages without such licenses, is in full force and operation. Under its provisions, and for the next year, the license must issue in the county where the marriage is performed. After Oct. 1st, 1895, the bride or the groom may obtain a license in the county of the residence of either, and such a license shall authorize the marriage ceremony to be performed in any county of this Commonwealth. Until that date the marriage license law remains as it was before the act of May 1st, 1893, was approved.

Judge Hughes quotes Judge Goff as saying that he did not desire the position and would not give up his commission of Circuit Judge for it. This announcement will strengthen the chances of Hon. Ancient Ruins in Arizona.

L. J. Court, a mining prospector, has just returned to Prescott, Ari., from a three months' sojourn in one of the most remote and little-known parts of the territory, and says that that section contains more Aztec ruins than any other portion of America, evidence of human habitation being found from the highest peaks to the lowest valleys. In one place he found a road or street three miles in length, perfectly smooth and straight and sixty feet in width. On either side of the street the entire distance are ruins. The road was evidently built prior to some mighty earthquake, as it ends abruptly at the brink of a mighty chasm. He dug up and found lying about a great number of skeletons which were in a fair state of preservation, the heads of all being alike—very large over the eyes and receding, and almost flat toward the back of the head; jaws well developed, but front upper and lower teeth small and sharp. The ruins show the people to have been workers in stone, some fragments of work in turquoise being found. Every available foot of land had once been cultivated. The region, although little has been known about it, is a very accessible one, and will no doubt become an interesting resort for travelers.

THE ART OF SCHOOL TEACHING.

For several months past the question of teachers' salaries has been agitated in a number of cities and counties of this State, notably in Philadelphia. It is asserted by teachers and by most newspapers that teachers are not receiving sufficient recompense for their services. In our own county, we are informed, the average salary is about $28 per month for a term of six months, making $168, the amount of money received for a year's services. Should the school term extend over the 12 months, at $28 per month, the pay would fair at least, but $168, being the total income for a year is clearly not sufficient.

The art of school teaching fits one for that profession and for no other. Manual labor during the summer months is plainly out of a line of one who is not used to it and a teacher should not be asked to do it. A good teacher will make preparation during the summer months for the work of the winter, and ought not to be expected to labor in other lines for his living during that time. We have schools for the purpose of teaching our children, not as a money-making concern, and we have no right to ask the teacher of the school to devote his or her time conscientiously to the instruction of our children, which will occupy the time of the whole year, and expect to get good service at $168 per annum.

We ought to take pride in efficient schools and school teachers and should aim at that rather than at the something which we can get for the smallest amount of money. Give the teacher a show.

The statistics relating to the pay of the 26.241 teachers of the State will be interesting. The total sum expended last year for this purpose was $8,998,343.

This amount might, at a casual glance, strike one as a rather large investment; but when reduced to its individual significance it means an average monthly salary for the male teacher of $44.16, and for the female teacher of $33 05 The schools of the State numbered in January last 24 541, with 12 869 grad d schools, which represents a gain of 1,094 schools during the preceding twelve months. The pupils had also increased from 1,004,407 to 1,040,679. One cause for this great growth may be found in the initial operation of the free text-book law. "Without doubt," declares Dr. Schaeffer, "the introduction of free text-books has been the most important step of progress since the year 1867. Several Superintendents specify an increase, ranging from 20 to 30 per cent. Others report better classification, better grading and better teaching as the result of free text-books."

Since 1873 the State has appropriated $41,000,000 for the public schools. State Superintendent Schaeffer has just issued a statement to that effect. From 1843 to 1874 there was appropriated $9,978,000 toward the maintenance of the schools. From 1874 until 1877 the annual appropriation was $1,000,000. Subsequently it was increased to $1,500,000, and afterwards to $2 000,000. Three years ago the amount was placed at $5,000,000 annually, and in 1893 to 5,500,000. During the Beaver Administration there was appropriated to the schools of the State $7,000,000, and during the Pattison Administration, $21,000,000.

The latest report of the National Bureau of Education places Pennsylvania only twenty-eighth with respect to the average salary of male teachers, and twenty-ninth with respect to the average salary of female teachers. Such a showing bears witness to a want of proper gratitude toward those public servants upon whom, after all, the education of the children of the State really depends.

The calamity howler will now have time to think of the story about the "little hatchet."

"Four hits at the Alms-house" and Hall received a majority of 204, as against Swope's 584. Two more "hits at the Alms-house" and Rockwell would have been elected.

SOMETHING OF A MISTAKE.

It seems that Mr. Deardorff, Republican, recently defeated as a candidate for the Legislature, is somewhat disgruntled with his party, and perhaps, with reason. Whether or not he has stopped his subscription to the Star and Sentinel, we do not know but it seems that the editor of that paper is very much concerned in Mr. Deardorff's reconciliation to the Republican party. Out of this apparent desire to bring Mr. Deardorff into line the editor of the Star and Sentinel calls upon us to retract two statements made during the campaign. If the editor was really concerned in Mr. Deardorff, he would not make this request of us because it simply occasions us to recall to the minds of the people circumstances which can not be pleasant to Mr. Deardorff.

It is expedient to say some things, for the information of voters, during a campaign, which should not be mentioned when not necessary, and it is to be regretted that the Star has again brought up those very injudicious expressions of opinion of their candidate.

The statements to which the Star alludes were given us by excellent and reputable gentlemen of York Springs, which have been verified upon futher inquiry.

We regret, for Mr. Deardorff's sake, this renewal of a past unpleasantness and have nothing further to say than that a true statement can not be recalled, and that our contemporary is mistaken in its assertion of Mr. Deardorff's "flattering vote in his own home."

Having heard that our contemporary is after the offices of the Alms-house, we are reminded that we heard the editor whistling "Home, Sweet Home" the other day.

PENSION CASES FEWER.

It is reported in Washington that a bill appropriating $140,000,000 for pensions, and $1 381,000 for other expenses, will be reported to the full House Committee on Appropriations, by the Subcommittee on Pensions.

In this connection Commissioner Lochren said: "In the year 1895, thirty years after the close of the war, the pension roll must, in the course of nature, reach its highest limit in numbers, and thereafter begin to decrease. The falling off in the presentation of claims is shown by the fact that the number of pending claims in the Bureau has decreased upward of 90,000 during the year. The large proportion of new claims filed are for increase by pensioners now on the rolls. New claims, well proved and of easily recognized merit, are still being filed by deserving soldiers, who have long refrained from asking Government bounty, and by widows and dependents of such soldiers. In 1891 the number of claims filed was 363,799, in 1894, 40,148."

CAN NOT BE DOWNED.

Democracy can pass through twenty storms like this and not be hurt. A few men don't like it, but the great heart of Democracy beats just the same.—St Louis Republic.

Future Democratic success rests in the hands of Democratic voters organized into a strong and unflinching Democratic party. While it is true that the party can go through twenty such defeats there is no need for the trial. Let good and firm members look to the best of the party, take an interest in every meeting or movement of the party and nineteen of those reverses will never need to be gone through. Twenty defeats cannot drive sincere men for a sincere purpose and those who have been sound Democrats before the last election are better Democrats now. Success must come through a community of interest. It will not come through any division or through the seeking of individual interests.

It is not too early to begin to think of elections to come and it is never too early to consider what changes need be made for the strengthening of organization or for the further spread of principles. As we have said before, the recent Republican victory was for no especial reason nor was it upon any particular principle and was indeed a surprise to the Republicans themselves Clearly no good Democrat has or will change his position by reason of it.

In 1892 we won a victory which has changed the policy of this country for the betterment of those who needed protection. It was such a victory as changes the policy of a country and though, by reason of misunderstanding of that policy, we went down this time, we have the satisfaction of knowing that our party has been the means of making a beneficial change in the government of our country.

We were at a loss to understand the stupendous conceit of our contemporary in claiming that it caused the recent Republican victory but since one of its editors is after both of the treasurships and the attorneyship of the Alms-house, it begins to look like a case of "whole hog."

THE GOVERNOR NAMES HIS MEN.

It was semi-officially announced last week that Gov. Hastings had named the following gentlemen to fill the offices:

Secretary of the Commonwealth, General Frank Reeder, of Northampton county.

Attorney General, Henry Clay McCormick, of Lycoming county.

Adjutant General, Colonel Thomas J. Stewart, of Montgomery county.

Private Secretary, Lewis E. Beitler, of Philadelphia, now Secretary to Mayor Stuart.

The selections look as if Mr. Quay pressed the botton and the Gov. did the rest. Mr. McCormick was Magee's choice and Reeder that of Senator Quay; Col. Stewart, as a reward for his getting out of the fight for Secretary of Internal Affairs, so as to allow Gen. Latta to be nominated; Col. Lambert's appointment is a personal one, and in recognition of his devotion and faithful services for the Governor-elect. The selection of Lewis E. Beitler can be set down to the credit of Mayor Stuart, who refused to enter the race for Governor.

Including the extras they are entitled to, the compensation of these gentlemen will amount to the following sums: Attorney General, $11,000 a year; Secretary of State, $10.000; Insurance Commissioner, about $15 000; Adjutant General, $2,500; Private Secretary, $3.000.

The appointment of Col. Stewart to be Adjutant General will leave a vacancy in the office of Secretary of Internal Affairs, as his term in that office does not expire until next May. In is more than likely that the Governor will appoint Gen. James W. Latta, of Philadelphia.

One laboring man at work is worth more than all the calamity howlers in the State.

All Republican exchanges now agree that "prosperity is assured, wages are being raised, men going to work," and so on, observes the West Chester Democrat, and all this is being done under a Democratic law. Howling in long meter has changed to facts in shorter verse.

BIDS FOR BONDS.

The aggregate of the bids offered for the issue of $50,000,000 of 5 per cent. bonds amounts to $154,370,900, more than three times the amount of the bonds. The price offered is such as to make the rate of interest to be paid by the Government under 3 per cent. Never before in our history have bonds been issued at a rate of interest so low. This large offer on the part of business men of the country for bonds, which pay such a small interest, must be indicative of confidence in our financial future and indicates also that good business men are always willing to aid the government when in straightened circumstances. Doubtless this new indication of confidence will hasten the revival of business.

If our contemporary desires to be considered an honorable newspaper it should not seek positions which it claims to have made, otherwise it lays itself open to just criticism. Was it trying to oust the Democrats so that it might get the patronage for itself? If so, where does the good of the county come in?

OUR POSTAL SERVICE.

Postmaster-General W. S. Bissell has submitted to the President his annual report for the year ended June 30 last. The report shows that his department has been managed on a business basis and that his administration has been devoted to giving the public the best possible postal facilities.

The revenue for the year was $75,080,479; expenditures, $84,324,414, leaving a deficiency of $9,243,935. The estimates for the current year, ending June 30, 1895, are: Revenue, $84,427,748; expenditures, $90,399,485; deficiency, $5,971,737. The estimates submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury for the next fiscal year are: Revenue, $86,907,407; expenditures, $91,059,283; deficiency, $4,151,876. This annual deficiency, the Postmaster-General says, could be overcome by an increase of postal rates, but he does not believe this advisable. It could be canceled by a readjustment of rates on second-class matter. The economies have consisted mainly in reletting contracts for mail transportation and in the cost and amount of supplies; also in the abrogation of seven of the eleven steamship subsidy contracts, which will mean a total saving in the ten years of the contract's life of $14,431,325.

Which are School Holidays.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Schaeffer has notified the secretaries of the boards of school directors that the directors may determine for themselves in all cases which days designated by law as public holidays shall be observed as school holidays in their respective districts. In case the schools are open for regular instruction on these days the time can be counted, reported and paid for the same as other days constituting a school month. This settles the numerous questions which are continually arising in all parts of the state pertaining to the observance of holidays. Teachers and directors will appreciate this information.

General Information.

Seventy thousand women voted in the State of Colorado at the last election. More than ten per cent. over the half of the entire vote polled in the State. Not one fight is reported to have occurred among them and nary an election officer did they talk to death. Such a truly remarkable occurence should not go unnoticed.

Through the capture of Port Arthur the Japanese are now within striking distance of Pekin. When the attack was made 23 Japanese torpedo boats made a concerted rush upon the entrance of the harbor of Port Arthur, and at the same time the Japanese land forces attacked the place from the rear, while a heavy artillery fire was poured into the Chinese forts. The Japanese infantry then stormed defense after defense. The Chinese resisted feebly. There were a few hand to hand fights, but finally, the Chinese became panic-stricken and the Japanese carried everything before them. Japan has three armies in the field and it appears that they are marching on the Chinese capital.

Death of Senator Ross.

State Senator George Ross, died at his home in Doylestown yesterday a week. Mr. Ross' term would have expired with the present Legislature. He was not a candidate for re-election.

Mr. Ross was born in Doylestown, in 1841. He graduated from Princeton College in 1864, and practiced law ever since in Bucks and neighboring counties. He was a member of the State Constitutional Convention in 1873; was elected to the State Senate in 1886 and re-elected in 1890. He was the Democratic candidate for Congress from the seventh district in 1884 and 1888.

He was buried on Thursday last from his home. His large acquaintance brought to his funeral many of the prominent men of the state, among whom he was a leader. As a Democrat he was prominent, being among the foremost of his party in intelligence and wisdom.

The remains were accompanied to the grave by the Senatorial Committee, representatives of the judiciary, members of the bar and hundreds of the Senator's friends and acquaintances.

A Young Man Instantly Killed.—An accident happened near Melrose, six miles from Hampstead, Md., Saturday morning, by which Claude Fridinger, aged about fifteen years, son of Mr. Jerome W. Fridinger, met his death. He had been out rabbit hunting and on returning placed his gun against a pump while he washed his hands. In some way the weapon was discharged, the load blowing the back part of his head completely away and scattering his brains about the pump. Death resulted instantaneously.—Emmitsburg Chronicle.

LIVELY TIMES IN ALABAMA.

Kolb, the Alabama Populist, at Birmingham, Tuesday, issued a manifesto declaring that he had been elected Governor of the State, and that "by the grace of God he would take his seat on December 1st." Governor Jones, when shown the telegram announcing this fact, remarked: William C. Oates has been elected Governor by the freely expressed will of a majority of the people of Alabama, and has so been declared by the General Assembly, the only tribunal which has the right or authority under the Constitution to declare this result. It is my duty to see that he is duly installed, and, by the grace of God, he will be. I do not anticipate that any number of men will be foolish enough to heed Kolb's advice, but if they do the consequences will be on their own heads."

Important Facts.—If you have dull and heavy pain across forehead and about the eyes; if the nostrils are frequently stopped up and followed by a disagreeable discharge; if soreness in the nose and bleeding from the nostrils is often experienced; if you are very sensitive to cold in the head accompanied with headache; then you may be sure you have catarrh; and should (immediately) resort to Ely's Cream Balm for a cure. The remedy will give instant relief.

Postmaster General Bissell's annual report will contain several novel suggestions and recommendations.

Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free, Senator Hill has gone South for a pleasure trip.

Haunted!—A haunted house in these practical and unromantic days is something of a rarity, but an individual haunted with the idea that his ailments is incurable is a personage frequently met with. Disbelief in the ability of medicine to cure is only a mild form of monomania, although in some cases repeated failures to obtain relief from many different sources would almost seem to justify the doubt. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has demonstrated its ability to overcome dyspepsia, constipation, liver and kidney trouble, malarial complaints and nervousness, and its recorded achievements in the curative line ought at least to warrant its trial by any one troubled with either of the above ailments, even although his previous efforts to obtain remedial aid have been fruitless. Used with persistence, the Bitters will conquer the most obstinate cases.

Heart Disease Relieved in 30 Minutes.—Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart gives perfect relief in all cases of Organic or Sympathetic Heart Disease in 30 minutes, and speedily effects a cure. It is a peerless remedy for Palpitation, Shortness of Breath, Smothering Spells, Pain in Left Side and all symptoms of a Diseased Heart. One dose convinces. Sold by John M. Huber.

The miners will probably withdraw from the Knights of Labor as the result of their failure to secure recognition in the New Orleans convention.

Mothers, why let the little one suffer from worms? Ambeson's Vermicide will rid them of this horrid pest. Safe, Sure and pleasant. 25 cts. at Huber's Drug Store.

Ladies who are run down by overwork, weak from nursing children, or debilitated from any cause, call for Beef Wine and Iron, full pint 75 cts., at Huber's Drug Store.

Reed will not be made Speaker of the House if Harrison and McKinley can prevent it. Neither of these gentlemen have any love for the ex-Czar.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and than concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Huber's Drug Store.

Kansas gave over 30,000 majority against woman suffrage.

The Jefferson Coal Company, of Coal Glen, has reduced the price of mining from 45 to 40 cents per ton.

Rheumatism Cured in a Day.—"Mystic Cure" for Rheumatism and Neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Sold and guaranteed by J. M. Huber, Druggist, Gettysburg.

Some of the largest deer ever shot in Bradford county are now being killed by the hunters of that region.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back. For sale by Huber's Drug Store.

HARPER'S BAZAR

Elegant and exclusive designs for Out-door and Indoor Toilettes, drawn from Worth models by Sandoz and Chapuis, are an important feature. These appear every week, accompanied by minute descriptions and details. Our Paris Letter, by Katharine de Forest, is a weekly transcript of the latest styles and caprices in the mode. Under the head of New York Fashions, plain directions and full particulars are given as to shapes, fabrics, trimmings, and accessories of the costumes of well-dressed women. Children's Clothing receives practical attention. A fortnightly Pattern-sheet Supplement enables readers to cut and make their own gowns. The woman who takes HARPER'S BAZAR is prepared for every occasion in life, ceremonious or informal, where beautiful dress is requisite.

An American Serial, Doctor Warrick's Daughters, by Rebecca Harding Davis, a strong novel of American life, partly laid in Pennsylvania and partly in the far South, will occupy the last half of the year.

My Lady Nobody, an intensely exciting novel, by Maarten Maartens, author of "God's Fool," "The Greater Glory," etc., will begin the year.

Essays and Social Chats. To this department Spectator will contribute her charming papers on "What We are Doing" in New York society.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus.

The Volumes of the BAZAR begin with the first Number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.

Cloth Cases for each volume, suitable for binding, will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $1 each. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Opening Services—Organization—Address of Welcome and Response—Large Attendance

The fortieth annual session of the Adams County Institute was called to order in the Court room yesterday afternoon by County Superintendent J W Thoman Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev A R Steck pastor of St James Lutheran church

Singing followed by the Institute accompanied by Miss Dora N Gilbert on the piano and Mr C A Decker on the violin

Supt Thoman then made a brief introductory speech in which he predicted a most successful Institute, and that this would be assured if the teachers would heartily co operate in the week's work He hoped all would take an earnest interest and thereby show their appreciation of the preparation made for their information and profit

Permanent organization was next in order when the following officers were unanimously chosen President Supt J W Thoman, Vice Presidents, Profs J Dorsey Hunter and Geo W Baler Recording Secretary, A E Jacobs Assistants Clara Dome and Miss Bernadina Corrigan Enrolling Secretaries, S A Nagle and Chas L Baker Corresponding Secretary Miss Sallie Biesecker Treasurer Prof J W Thoman

Wm Hersh Esq, on behalf of the citizens welcomed the teachers in a graceful address dwelling on the importance of education and the teacher's opportunities in the wider dissemination of knowledge, they having under their training the youthful plastic mind, upon which they could make lasting impressions for future usefulness

Mr C E Allison of Mountpleasant township on behalf of the teachers, happily responded acknowledging the kind words of greeting He spoke at some length on the progress of the school system in the county and referred to Thaddeus Stevens and others who had been prominent in establishing and fostering it

The following committees were then appointed by the president

Executive Committee — S A Nagle D I Smith L W Cook, John Currens and Miss May J Gardner

[illegible] Committee — Horace G Comfort Thomas McBride I G Nagle, Misses Zula Deatrick and Annie M Hake

Obituary — D I Smith, Charles A Landis Misses Frances Goldsborough, Adelaide Kuhn and Florence Richter

Election Committee — P M Harboldt Robert Clare G I Thomas Charles Richter J P Snyder, Charles Carbaugh Harry King Charles Palmer W A Neely F I Sterry Walter Rhodes Ernest Grammer P S Orner John Rudisill Howard Slagle W W Lisenhart Geo W Gulden Robert Myers M J Cook, George Black Lewis Carbaugh Harvey Schwartz Harvey Plank, Homer Troup Frank Watson E L Leas

The next period on the program was occupied by Dr G W Hull of Lancaster in a practical talk in which he graphically described "The Successful Teacher" He was followed by Prof J I Kemp of East Stroudsburg on "Power Tests in Teaching" an address full of practical thought

The attendance at the opening session was flatteringly large 181 out of the 186 teachers in the county being in attendance

In the evening Mrs H I Monroe delighted a large audience with an illustrated lecture "Christian Art" during which many of the finest paintings of the old masters were reproduced and described The College musical clubs added much to the evening's enjoyment

Home Wedding.

The residence of Mrs Wm D Holtzworth South Baltimore street was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Thursday afternoon, the parties being her only daughter Miss Mary and Mr Jacob Ramer of the Hat and Shoe firm of Ramer & Weist Promptly at 3 o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor, Miss Lula Kitzmiller as bridesmaid and Mr Chas W Holtzworth oldest brother of the bride as groomsman Mrs Dr I M Fush of Bellefonte sister of the groom rendered Mendelssohn's wedding march on the piano The impressive ceremony of the Lutheran church was conducted by Rev I S Black pastor of Christ church The bride wore white India silk trimmed in white lace the bridesmaid in white cashmere and brocaded satin the gentlemen in usual black The ladies each carried Marechal Neil roses Messrs Frank Meals Chas W Troxel Maurice Miller and Harry Pfeffer acted as ushers After hearty congratulations and best wishes the large company enjoyed a view of the many useful and handsome presents, and partook of elegant refreshments The rooms were tastefully decorated in ivy and chrysanthemums

A PLEASANT INVASION of the Methodist parsonage on Baltimore street occurred last Wednesday evening The undersigned were taken by complete surprise and the abundance of substantial tokens of the friendship and kindness of their members and friends in Gettysburg calls forth this word of thanks Such "coming events (do not always) cast their shadows before them," but they are greatly appreciated notwithstanding Again to all our hearty thanks

Farming and Manufacturing.

PRICES AND CONDITIONS.

The Export of Wheat and Its Effect on the Treasury Supply of Gold.

As a comparison of one's business with that of another's always interesting, we take from the Baltimore Sun, an article which compares the relative situations of farmers and mechanics. The farmer is the most independent business man in this country and his sources of revenue are the most numerous.

There are and have been ever since the passage of the new tariff bill signs of a revival of industry all over the country. Fires have been lighted in furnaces and factories which had suspended during the uncertainty and depression of the Senate tariff debate and are now operating with renewed and increased activity. But there is one great obstacle to the return of substantial prosperity which must not be overlooked. The millions of people in the United States who are engaged in the production of wheat and cotton form the greatest consuming class. With cotton at five cents a pound and wheat at fifty cents a bushel these people cannot buy manufactured goods. The price obtained will scarcely pay taxes and labor and the ordinary expenses of conducting the farm. After the cost of production is met no surplus remains to buy even those things which are considered necessaries of life, much less for the purchase of luxuries.

The fertilizer bill must be reduced, the old farm machinery will have to be patched up, while the farmer and his wife and daughters must defer the time for the purchase of a new suit of clothes. New buildings and all but the absolutely necessary repairs to the old ones must also be abandoned. Where, then, is the product of the factories to be consumed? The manufacturing plant of the United States can in six months produce enough to supply the home market, on which the reliance of the factories is placed for a whole year. And this it can do even when the farmers and planters are prosperous and buying what they need. This is one of the results of the overstimulation of manufactures by the protective policy.

If we estimate the crop of wheat in the United States at five hundred million bushels, and that it takes fifty cents a bushel to pay expenses, then since the McKinley bill went into effect, four years ago, the farmers have $250,000,000 a year less with which to buy of the manufacturers. One year ago cotton was worth 8¼ cents a pound. Now it is worth 5 cents. Accepting the estimate of nine million bales for the crop of the present year, this means that the revenues of the cotton States will be diminished by $146,000,000 on a single staple. The average price of cotton for the decade ended with 1877 was about 18 cents; for that ended with 1887 it was 12 cents, and from 1884 to 1893 it was over 10 cents. It will be seen, therefore, how enormously the purchasing power of the cotton States decreased, each cent a pound amounting to $45,000,000 on a single crop. But the decrease of revenue is more than it apparently is. If what remains is only sufficient to pay the expense of producing the crop and it is probably not even sufficient for that, then the entire fund from this source available for buying supplies from the factories is gone.

And it is not the manufacturers alone upon whom this blow will fall. The Western farmers will suffer as well. When better prices for cotton prevailed the South devoted its entire energies to its production, buying its meat, corn, hay and mules from the West. This the South can no longer do, but must raise these articles for itself or go without. The result of this necessity is already apparent in the increased production of corn and meat in the South and the increased distress of the Western farmer.

The effect of the low price of wheat and cotton upon what is called the balance of trade must be great, and it will account in a measure for the greater outflow of gold from this country to Europe during the last year or two. The average annual export of wheat from the United States is not far from a hundred and fifty million bushels, and of cotton this year will reach seventeen hundred million pounds. Instead of bringing back from Europe $320,000,000 as it did when wheat was a dollar and cotton ten cents, America will receive only $160,000,000. This means that the difference must be made up in some other way, and it is partly done by shipping gold.

The out look for the farmer seems gloomy enough, but to us not so dark as that of the factory operative and others dependent on the manufacturing interests. The farmer, if he is out of debt, can get along. He has a roof over his head and no monthly rent to pay. He can raise on his farm sufficient food for his family and will find not much difficulty about his clothes. But if the factories go into overproduction and have to close for half the year, how are the inhabitants of the factory towns going to pay rent and buy food? That is a question worth considering.

Mulching of Strawberries.

As plants grow until freezing weather sets in, mulching must be delayed until the ground is frozen sufficiently to hold up a loaded wagon. With a wide-tired vehicle there is less danger of injuring the crowns. Any kind of straw may be used. That most free from weed or grass seeds is best. Stable manure is good where the land needs enriching, but it must not be placed directly on the plants. Marsh hay is most desirable but any straw or coarse litter will answer.

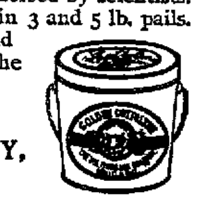

The object of mulching strawberries in autumn is to prevent rapid thawing. When once frozen the frost should come out very gradually. If the ground is merely shaded this object will be accomplished. To conserve moisture in the spring until after the berries are picked, apply the mulch thickly between the rows. Put a little light chaff directly on the plants. Rake off this chaff when growth begins. As freezing and thawing is not rapid or frequent in December, mulching may often be delayed even to the letter part of January.

FIVE thousand replies received by the Department of Agriculture as to the cost of producing wheat, show that the average cost an acre is $11.48. In North Dakota there seems to be the lowest cost, $7.48, and in Massachusetts the highest, $28.81. For the whole country, the average yield an acre is less than thirteen bushels. The same States also show the lowest and highest cost an acre for corn, namely, $8.06 for North Dakota and $43 58 for Massachusetts, the general average cost being $11.71.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE IN 1895.

THE SIMPLETONS is a novel by Thomas Hardy, will be begun in the December Number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists, it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and THE SIMPLETONS may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degree to that which has marked TRILBY—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS OF JOAN OF ARC, by the Sieur Louis de Conte, her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on CHARLESTON AND THE CAROLINAS, the first of a series of Southern Papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empires. The next volume of HARPER'S MAGAZINE will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the MAGAZINE a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of CHINESE LIFE AND MANNERS. Besides the long stories, there will begin in the January Number the first chapters of A THREE-PART NOVELETTE, by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the MAGAZINE.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus.

The Volumes of the MAGAZINE begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order. Cloth cases, for binding, 50 cents each—by mail, postpaid. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Percheron Horses.

In the midst of the general decline of values which has marked the last few years, no horses have suffered less than the Percherons. The reason is that the Percheron combines, in an eminent degree, weight and strength with activity. It occupies a place between the light classes, of which the American road horse is a fair type and the ponderous, powerful but slow-moving draft horses of British or Belgian origin. The Percheron is, in a sense, a made-up breed, but it has been bred on strict lines so long that the type has become as firmly fixed as that of the Arab itself. The oriental horses which were left in France when the tide of Saracenic invasion was turned back by Charles Martel, crossed upon the native mares, helped to form the breed of La Perche. Subsequent infusions of Arab and Barb blood have contributed to maintain the spirit, action and docility for which the Percheron is distinguished among heavy horses. The French government, royal, imperial, or republican, has always taken a special interest in horse breeding, and aided it by expert supervision, prizes and subsidies. With this encouragement and a genuine love for the persuit, it is little wonder that French horse breeders have striven to maintain the purity and high character of their horses. An additional stimulant has been given during the last thirty years by the demands of the American market which afforded a profitable outlet for a large part of the surplus of really good horses. The earliest importations to this country consisted mostly of gray horses. But the Brilliants and many other black Percherons were so excellent in quality, and attained such great reputation that black has become a popular color for the breed among American horsemen.—Am. Agriculturist.

Digestibility of Food.

Animal food, such as meats, fish, eggs and milk, are rather more digestible than most of the vegetable foods, although bread made from ordinary white flour is very easily and completely digested. Bread from whole white wheat flour, or that from which only part of the hull of the grain has been removed, is not so completely digestible, but is decidedly healthy for some people in aiding the passage of the food through the intestines.

There are great differences in people in respect to the power for utilizing different kinds of food. Milk is one of the most wholesome and digestible of foods, and yet there are people who cannot endure it. Late research makes it probable that in the changes which milk undergoes in the body injurious compounds are sometimes formed, and that this is the reason why milk does not agree with some people. The case is the same with eggs, with certain fruits, as the strawberry, and, indeed, with many different food materials. Hence, it may be literally true, that "one man's meat is another man's poison." But while there are exceptions the general rule holds good that for ordinary people with good powers of digestion and assimilation the nutritive values of the ordinary standard food materials are measured pretty accurately by their chemical composition, and that the right mixtures of food are those which furnish the nutrients in the proportions demanded by the body.—Good Housekeeping.

Keeping Apples in the Cellar.

Apples intended for wintering in the cellar or for home use, should not be placed there until cold weather, and during all their journey from the tree should be handled with great care, to avoid abrasion of the skin, or bruises which often prove as destructive as when the skin is broken. Such long-keeping varieties as Russets may, if in good order, be placed directly in barrels and not again handled until ripe in March or April. It is best to place other varieties in bushel boxes or upon hanging shelves and then not more than five or six deep, so that they may be looked over occasionally and the damaged or decayed ones removed. If the cellar is naturally dry, causing the fruit to shrivel, then place near to or directly upon the cellar bottom, where it is, of course, cooler and more moist. However, if damp and liable to cause mold or induce decay, then remove them as far as possible from the floor, as the dryest atmosphere rises to the ceiling. During the winter if an apple shows the least signs of decay remove it and at once use it in any available manner desired.

What's in a Sleeve.

Bret Harte's famous Chinaman, Ah Sin, is said to have been peculiar for ways that were dark and tricks that were vain, and one of the peculiarities of this foxy individual was the skill with which he utilized the fashions of his native land in playing the great American game of poker. So great was his success that the Americans, who were playing with him, lost patience and "went for that heathen Chinee" in a sudden and energetic manner. The result is declared in the touching quatrain:

"In his sleeves, which were long,
We found twenty-four packs,
Which is coming it strong,
But I state but the facts."

Now the American girl has taken to big sleeves, but as if in dread of any possible comparison with the dark and tricky Ah Sin, she has turned them upside down, as it were, with all the bigness about the shoulders. The fashions has been running to extremes, as fashions do before they die, but there seems to be no limit to the size of these double-back-action sleeves. Already they are so large that they vie with the latest opera hats, which were specially designed to obscure the view of the stage as much as possible in order that attention might be concentrated upon the wearer.

The New York Herald says that sleeves are still growing bigger and that the very latest ones resemble minature balloons and require as much material as all the rest of the costume. Sixteen yards of material are sometimes used in one sleeve.

It would be a mistake to check this development, for it may be extended and applied so as to prove a most economical and sensible fashion. The sleeves might each be made to contain the same amount of material as the skirt of the dress, but each sleeve of a totally different color, material and pattern. They could then be readily made interchangeable, so that either of the balloon-like contrivances could be used for a skirt, and the wearer would be happy in the possession of three totally different dresses at the cost of one.

The effect would also be striking and varied. We might, for example, observe a yellow balloon on a red pedestal, while one noticing the lady from the other side would see a blue ballon on a red pedestral, the sleeves concealing the wearer from the gaze of the curious and affording a welcome protection when passing corner loungers. From front or rear a bewildering kaleidoscope or pleasing harmony of color would meet the gaze according to the taste of the party inside.

A Monkey Which Reasoned.

CHARLES H. COE.

I was stopping at a hotel in Jacksonville, Fla. My windows overlooked the back yards of several stores which fronted on Bay street. In the rear of one of these, and right under my windows, a monkey about as large as a cat was chained to a large live oak tree. The chain was a long one, allowing the monkey to climb into the branches of the tree and also to the flat roof of a shed near by.

The gambols and tricks of that little monkey afforded me much amusement, and I watched it with no little astonishment as well, for many of its actions showed a human-like intelligence to an uncommon degree, such as I had never before witnessed in an animal. I will give one example of its reasoning power.

A characteristic of the live oak tree is the presence of a hole or "well" situated at a point where the trunk separates into several wide-spreading branches. This tree is different from most varieties in that its main trunk, however large or old the tree may be, continues for only a short distance from the ground, frequently not over 10 or 15 feet and sometimes not half of that. The well is generally large enough to hold a gallon or more of rainfall. Water is usually present, except in the dryest seasons, and this accounts for the common name.

One day I bought a dozen doughnuts, the kind with a hole through the middle, and carried them to my room. The greater part of them were laid away and forgotten until they were too hard to eat. Thinking the monkey would like them, I threw him one and he snatched it up and scampered to the top of the shed. The monkey had evidently never seen a doughnut before, for he gave it a most critical examination. He then held it up and peeped through the hole, and next placed it on one of his fingers and twirled it around with evident delight. Finally, having exhausted his curiosity, he tried to bite a piece out of it, but it was too hard for this. Another trial with his teeth failed to make any impression, apparently.

Then he held it off at arm's length, looking at it earnestly meanwhile, as if considering—as he really was—what he would do next. All at once an idea entered the little fellow's head—the water! And like a flash he jumped from the roof to the live oak tree and thence to the well in the crotch. Stooping down over the well, he actually held the doughnut in the water, as the reader would soak a crust of bread in his tea or coffee. He held it there perhaps five or ten seconds, when he withdrew it to see if it was soft enough to eat. This operation was repeated several times, until finally the doughnut was soaked so that it could be eaten without difficulty. He then scampered back to the roof and enjoyed the result of his intelligence.

I gave him all of the cakes at different times thereafter, and he held each one in the well of water immediately on receiving it, his first experience having taught him that it would be useless to try to eat them without soaking.

This act of the monkey's should not be underrated on account of, or likened to, an apparently similar act of the common raccoon (procyon lotor). The latter animal has a habit, especially in confinement, of dipping or washing its food in water before eating it. This is not an intelligent act, but only an instinctive habit. In its wild state the food of the raccoon consists chiefly of crabs, frogs, lizards, small turtles etc., which it takes from marshes and other shallow waters, almost invariably using its fore paws for this purpose. In captivity its food is different, but the old habit of taking its natural food from the water clings and causes an imitation by dipping or washing nearly everything that is eaten.

The essential difference between instinct and reason, as generally accepted is this: Instinct is an inherited trait or habit, and embraces those acts of animals performed under the same or similar and oft-recurring circumstances by all the individuals of the same species. Squirrels and bees store up food, and birds set patiently on their eggs until they hatch; not because they know the food will be needed by and by, nor that the eggs will produce chickens, but simply from an instinctive habit, transmitted from one generation to another.

Feminine Charity.

They were never very good friends, and now they don't speak at all. They met the other morning on the street.

"I saw Charlie Iverson about fifteen minutes ago," said one.

"Where?" inquired the other.

"Down street."

"Did you speak to him?"

"Only bowed."

"How was he looking?"

"Very well, indeed."

"Is that so?"

"Of course."

"I should'en't have thought so. He asked me to marry him last night and I refused."

"Gracious! that's the very reason he should be looking well, I think."—Detroit Free Press.

THEY were talking of the vanity of women, and one of the few ladies present undertook a defense. "Of course," she said, "I admit that women are vain and men are not. Why," she added, with a glance around, "the necktie of the handsomest man in the room is even now up the back of his collar." And then she smiled—for every man present had put his hand up behind his neck.—Drake's Magazine.

WIFE—"I thought you were going fishing?" Husband—"I am, but I'm going to get some bait first." Wife—"Remember, William, you've signed the pledge.

ALTHOUGH much money has been collected for the erection of General Grant's tomb the construction goes on very slowly. Dr. Schenck's

Mandrake Pills have a value as a household remedy far beyond the power of language to describe. The family can hardly be true to itself that does not keep them on hand for emergencies.

MANDRAKE

Is the only vegetable substitute for that dangerous mineral, MERCURY, and while its action as a curative is fully equal, it possesses none of the perilous effects.

In Constipation, Mandrake acts upon the bowels without disposing them to subsequent Costiveness.

No remedy acts so directly on the liver, nothing so speedily cures Sick Headache, Sour Stomach and Biliousness as these PILLS.

For sale by all Druggists. Price 25 cts. per box; 3 boxes for 65 cts.; or sent by mail, postage free, on receipt of price. Dr. J. H. Schenck & Son, Phila. July 18, 1893. tf

$40.00 PER WEEK FOR WILLING WORKERS

of either sex, any age, in any part of the country, at the employment which we furnish. You need not be away from home over night. You can give your whole time to the work, or only your spare moments. As capital is not required you run no risk. We supply you with all that is needed. It will cost you nothing to try the business. Any one can do the work. Beginners make money from the start. Failure is unknown with our workers. Every hour you labor you can easily make a dollar. No one who is willing to work fails to make more money every day than can be made in three days at any ordinary employment. Send for free book containing the fullest information.
